After two years of major renovations and upgrades, this Charlottesville-area resort reopens in August as a delightful homage to Southern hospitality. You'll pass your days with 18 holes on the Pete Dye-designed golf course, trading volleys on the clay tennis courts, or simply relaxing underneath a waterside cabana at the outdoor infinity pool, then dress up for dinner at Marigold by Jean-Georges, the resort's seasonally-inspired eatery helmed by legendary French chef Jean-Georges Vongerichten. Pop by Crawford's, the cozy on-site bar, for a nightcap, then settle in for a luxurious night's sleep in any one of the 80 plush rooms and suites. Attention all couples who require ample space while getting ready: you'll be pleased to know that all accommodations come equipped with double vanities in the bathrooms.
